What's New In?

Microsoft Expression Encoder is an app that is designed to quickly share the contents of the Web and Windows 8 Store Apps. It's an easy to use app that allows for encoding media in HD or 4K quality. When you launch the app you'll get a few introductory screens for setting up a project, in order to load the media you want to create an encoded stream for. It's very easy to get started, in fact you'll be able to start almost instantly. Upon the project is loaded, you'll get a list of the media files you've added, so you can control what's being added. You can easily change the encoding settings and the resolution or any other aspect of the project. The process is handled very quickly, and you should be able to add HD video and have it ready to be posted in no time at all. You can select a few templates that will help you create a fully fledged media package, in no time at all. You can create streaming videos and package those, along with your own assets. Many options are available, from images to music and even hardware. You're able to choose the settings for adding both audio and video. Audio can be added manually, or you can listen to the music that's being broadcast, from your library. You're able to customize any aspect of the app, such as choosing between encoding for HD or 4K. You'll also get fullscreen controls for your media, with a nice visual interface. When you're ready, you can hit the encode button and your media will be encoding. You'll get a status screen that shows you what's going on. You'll be able to monitor the process and can pause at any time. Once done, you can post the finished package or a link to it.

What's New in Version 2.0.6: This version of the app comes with stability and bug fixes. Media Encoder Settings Microsoft Expression Encoder is a very easy to use app. Once it has been installed, you'll be able to launch the app immediately after updating your device.
